

Glycerine is a safe humectant, but it readily supports microbial growth if the manufacturer fails to include an adequate preservative system.

Unpreserved humectants turn clients into accidental terrariums.