

Industrial-grade propylene glycol often contains toxic contaminants, meaning only pharmaceutical grades belong in tattoo ink formulations.

Antifreeze belongs in the radiator, not the sparkly unicorn.