

Increasing the stroke distance requires the needle to travel further per cycle, significantly reducing the overall cycle rate.
True artistry requires letting the ink steep like a dark winter tea.