

Long taper configurations deliver minimal pigment per strike, creating the smallest entry wounds for detailed work and gradual layering.
A shovel is a remarkably poor tool for stirring tea.