

Professional consistency comes from balancing the overarching system of variables rather than relying on a memorized display screen setting.
The screen only tells you what you asked for, not what you actually need.