

Configuration shapes the entry wound.
Determines total pigment channels.
Dictates tissue trauma profile.
Loose groupings allow lighter deposition.

Fewer needles create less physical trauma during fine detail work.
Long tapers release less pigment per individual strike.