

The immune system recognizes tattoo ink as a foreign body and sends macrophages to contain the invasion.
Round up the usual suspects.