

Carbon-based black inks containing polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons can become photochemically reactive and generate localized stress under ultraviolet exposure.

Deep blackwork transforms mortals into creatures of the night.