
Photochromic nanoparticle inks remain invisible under standard lighting but shift shift to vibrant colors when exposed to ultraviolet radiation.

Biology finally gets a glitchy toggle switch.