A 2026 meta-analysis covering 140,841 participants found no statistically significant association between tattooing and overall skin cancer risk.

The greatest battle of our time ended in a statistical shrug