Touching a healing wound with unwashed hands introduces debris and causes severe irritation.

The grime was purely structural.