

When equipment has dual personal and business use, only the business proportion is treated as a deductible expense.
Sharing expenses feels much fairer until you have to share the actual device.