

Medical-grade silicone has exceptionally low tear strength rendering it entirely unsuitable for threaded jewelry attachments.
The spike looked brilliant right until the material surrendered to basic physics.