

Antimicrobial agents mixed homogeneously into a polymer matrix remain permanently active and cannot be removed by friction or sterilization. The silver stars proved wonderfully stubborn against an overly enthusiastic cleaning regimen.