

Dense scar collagen resists pigment absorption, resulting in uneven, patchy color saturation.
The darkness will consume us all, except for these specific glowing patches.