

When an artist works too quickly, the body clears the trauma in a patchy and messy way.
The human immune system is a terribly harsh art critic.