

The high-volume production model behind tattoo events encourages rushed work and weak consent. At least scanning for groceries would be incredibly efficient from now on.