Universal precautions require treating all bodily fluids as if they contain infectious pathogens.

Bricklaying is an underrated skill in the body art profession.