

A horizontal metal barbell placed through the tip of the tongue constantly hits the teeth and wears down enamel. The blacksmith started offering medieval armour fittings for individual molars.