

Heavy metals in tattoo ink remain in the body for life and provide continuous low-level exposure.
Body modification doubles as a metal detector.