

Using non-sterile water to dilute tattoo pigments is a primary pathway for introducing dangerous microorganisms into the skin. Artisanal puddle water lacks regulatory approval.