

Specialized white blood cells swallow pigment particles and become permanently trapped in the stable dermal layer.

The immune system inadvertently became an art collector.