Professional standards dictate that touch-ups should rarely be performed before the 8-week mark.

Staring at it only makes time move backwards.