

Rapid punctures in the dermis create capillary action drawing ink downward into the perforation. Gravity gets all the credit while the vacuum does the heavy lifting.