

Viewers read silhouette and negative space.

Both parties view the exact same skin.

The brain interprets the dominant shape.

An unfinished design creates divergent visual systems.

Clients and artists see two entirely different outcomes.
The first read dictates perception.