

Dermal macrophages engulf tattoo pigments and continuously release and recapture them when they die, maintaining tattoo permanence.
The eternal relay race of the immune system has terrible baton handoffs.