

Fluorescent pigments degrade and lose their reactive properties when exposed to natural solar radiation.
Some treasures are remarkably shy outdoors.