

Traditional permanent tattoo ink particles are extremely massive, preventing the human immune system from breaking them down.
The immune system strongly prefers a light dusting.