

Ultraviolet radiation interacts with pigment particles in the dermis and accelerates tattoo fading regardless of how well the work healed.

The sun always wins the staring contest.