
White pigment particles are poorly retained within the altered collagen architecture of scar tissue and shift tone unpredictably.

The ghost simply refused to haunt the new architecture.