

Rough jewelry surfaces allow healing cells to grow into microscopic gaps, leading to tissue tearing when the jewelry moves. Evicting microscopic squatters is a logistical nightmare.