

Anodization changes the thickness of the natural oxide layer to create color without adding a coating that can chip off. Electricity is a much tidier medium than wet paint.