

Pure gold is far too soft to hold structural shape and must be alloyed with other metals to be practical.

Extreme malleability is rarely a desired trait in structural hardware.