

Anodizing uses electric current to thicken the titanium oxide layer to create structural colors without using applied dyes.
Harnessing severe meteorological events is an inefficient coloring method.