

Microbial contamination has been found in sealed tattoo ink bottles labeled as sterile. The microbes are polite enough to wait until the seal is broken to introduce themselves.