

A retrospective analysis found 30.5 percent of unopened tattoo ink samples labeled sterile had viable bacteria.
A printed label is merely a suggestion of reality.