

Air pockets trapped inside hollow instruments create a cavitation shadow that completely prevents ultrasonic cleaning.
The air pocket provided an excellent umbrella against the sound waves.