

Black tattoo ink consists primarily of carbon and remains significantly more stable against light degradation than lighter colors.
Sudden botanical disappearance left avian residents deeply confused.