

Human skin is a moving substrate with varying mechanical properties across different areas.
The ironing board remains the ultimate stabilization technology.