

Complex robotic machinery contains various joints and crevices that present significant sterilization challenges. Mummifying the operator ensures completely sterile environments.