

Heavy deposits of dense black pigment increase the likelihood of heat sensations during magnetic resonance imaging.
The human body makes for a terrible induction stove.