

Colloidal silver compounds previously used in body art products are now classified as suspected reproductive toxicants.
The local well water now has a remarkably metallic aftertaste.