
The federal regulatory framework primarily targets microbial contamination in cosmetics rather than establishing premarket chemical limits.
A microscope is the only badge this investigator respects.