

A product explicitly certified for the European Union is not automatically legal for distribution under the independent British framework. Geography is the strictest critic of an inventory.