

Tying job interviews to permanent body modification creates environments of coerced consent.
Final interview stages demand high tolerance for poor management