

Practitioners must complete specific bloodborne pathogen exposure control training to maintain their registration.
The microscopic pathogens never stood a chance against proper certification