

A lack of significant association exists between a claim of sterility on a product label and the absence of bacterial contamination.
A fancy sticker cannot compensate for a total lack of basic hygiene.