
Tattoo needles bypass the protective epidermis layer to deposit ink deep into the dermal tissue. The heavily fortified epidermal security gate is no match for a rapidly vibrating pointy object.