Using contaminated water or other solvents during ink manufacturing can introduce harmful microbes into the final product.
The pristine mountain spring water on the label was apparently sourced from a puddle behind the warehouse.