

Informed consent is severely compromised when permanent body modifications are tied to professional opportunities.

Signing a medical waiver while desperately chasing a paycheck constitutes a slight conflict of interest